Thanks to All Ad Hoc Reviewers

Among the most valuable contributors to the quality of the Journal of American College Health are the many men and women who volunteer to serve as ad hoc reviewes for the nearly 140 manuscripts that we receive annually. Consulting editors, who must be members of the American College Health Association, need the help of reviewers who have expertise in the diverse fields of our authors' submissions. We express our thanks and deep gratitude to them for the time and effort they have devoted to providing thoughtful evaluations of these works. We also thank those who have served informally and anonymously, consulting with authors, colleagues, and other reviewers, for their insightful advice and comments. Reviewing is often tedious work for which we cannot offer any tangible reward other than listing these college health professionals in a thank you note in the final issue of each volume year. Some ad hoc reviewers are retired or former consulting editors, others may one day become consulting editors as a result of their proven editorial skills in working with the journal.
